

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

4.1 Conclusion

The most important lessons the author realized during the internship were the importance of adaptability, effective communication, and a positive attitude. These skills were essential for understanding and following the instructions given by the staff.

During the internship, the author was given the opportunity to work in various outlets, including Venezia Restaurant, Maya, and the Indian-Thai fusion restaurant White Lotus. Upon completing the assigned duties at Maya, the author consistently extended working hours by an additional three hours at White Lotus to learn about Thai cuisine. The chefs at White Lotus were highly supportive and welcoming, encouraging the author's enthusiasm for learning.

The author is very grateful for this opportunity, as it provided valuable experience working with international colleagues. The chefs consistently showed appreciation for the author's willingness to learn. For example, during free time, the author would proactively approach the Executive Sous Chef to request additional tasks and also visit the Thai section at White Lotus Restaurant to study Thai cuisine, where the chefs provided thorough and supportive guidance.

4.2 Problems and solution

1. Communication

I was really hard to understand about what actually the chef wants to me to do it. So, the solution we usually use google translate to communication. Similar problem when I worked at India kitchen one of the chefs, when he speak usually mixing India and English and talk very fast. It was hard for me to understand. So, the solution I need to really focus and he said if I don't understand about what he said to me just say "repeat".
